Experience the World from a New Perspective

Over the course of a nearly 20-year alliance, Lindblad Expeditions and National Geographic have created meaningful travel experiences that foster a passion for the planet and its people. From the moment you join one of our South Pacific expeditions, you access all the resources that stem from this shared legacy of discovery.

A Ship Purpose-Built for the Pacific Region

On expeditions in the South Pacific, we explore secluded atolls, remote bays, and the shallow waters of small tropical isles that larger ships cannot reach. National Geographic Orion is intimately scaled and luxuriously appointed for maximum comfort, but purpose-built to safely navigate vast expanses of the world's largest ocean. With a fleet of versatile Zodiacs, kayaks, and paddle boards, as well as a full complement of snorkeling and diving gear, you have all the tools for exploration above and below the water.

Take Great Photos With the Pros

A National Geographic Photography Expert and a Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic certified photo instructor (CPI) join each voyage to assist travelers with everything from camera settings to composition. Every guest—from smartphone camera users to advanced hobbyists—can stand side by side with top photographers, pick up tips in the field, and return home with the photos of a lifetime. With our complimentary OM System Photo Gear Locker, you can field test new lenses, camera bodies, and more.

Active Exploration Every Day

Our itineraries feature a range of activities designed to immerse you in these spectacular environments. Whether you choose to walk among the world's rarest penguin species on remote Subantarctic islands, swim into an other-worldly grotto on Makatea in French Polynesia, or snorkel and dive the vibrant underwater world of Raja Ampat, you will be able to explore your way, every day.

Exclusive Undersea Program

As part of our exclusive undersea program, an undersea specialist uses a high-definition video camera and deploys a Remotely Operated Vehicle (ROV) that allows us to peer even deeper into the South Pacific's sapphire waters—up to 1,000 feet beneath the surface. Footage is shared during daily recaps, inviting all guests to witness the sharks, sunken coral gardens, and other sea life that thrives in the watery world below us.

Commitment to Conservation

Sustainability is at the heart of our mission, and you can travel with peace of mind, knowing every voyage we sail gives back to the places we explore. Together with our guests, we have contributed nearly $20 million to the conservation of marine and coastal habitats through the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic Fund. These donations support projects like National Geographic's Pristine Seas program, which aims to protect the wildest places in the ocean through a combination of research, storytelling, and strategic partnership initiatives.

New Zealand & the Subantarctic Islands

New Zealand's natural beauty beckons with soaring snow-capped peaks, crystalline lakes, and beaches of powdery white sand. On a voyage down under, take in this superlative scenery or venture to the rarely visited Subantarctic islands, home to a vast array of endemic flora and fauna found nowhere else on Earth.

The Extraordinary Wildlife of the Subantarctic Islands

Remote and rarely visited, the Subantarctic islands serve as critical breeding grounds for staggering numbers of endemic and endangered wildlife. Situated midway between Australasia and Antarctica, the islands belonging to New Zealand make up a UNESCO World Heritage site, while Australia's Macquarie Island issues just 1,000 landing permits per year—all part of robust conservation efforts for hundreds of avian species, including four types of penguins found nowhere else on the planet.

Royal penguins on Macquarie Island, Australia.

Yellow-eyed penguin

The rarest—and thought to be the most ancient—of the penguin species, the yellow-eyed variety nests in the coastal forests of the Subantarctic islands. The roughly 2,000 individuals in existence are distinguished by the bands of yellow feathers around their yellow eyes and necks.

Erect-crested penguin

Coming ashore only to breed and molt, erect-crested penguins are found on the tiny Bounty and Antipodes Islands. The female lays two eggs, and the second chick—typically the larger and stronger of the two—is often the sole surviving offspring.

Royal penguin

One of the world's greatest wildlife spectacles, 850,000 pairs of royal penguins greet visitors to Australia's remote Macquarie Island. Four other species of penguin breed here, but this is the only place in the world to find the charismatic breeding royals.

Fiordland crested penguin

Recognized by the white stripes on their cheeks, the endemic Fiordland crested penguin (tawaki) has a relatively diverse habitat distribution. Find them under rocks and fallen trees, in sea caves, and sheltered amidst coastal shrubs.

Campbell teal

Endemic to New Zealand's Campbell Island group, this small, flightless bird is the rarest duck in the world, with counts numbering around 500 individuals. The species was recently brought back from the brink of extinction—in 1990, population estimates were as low as 60.

Buller's albatross

Marine and pelagic, Buller's albatross breeds on four New Zealand island groups and otherwise lives at sea. A handsome species, it has a seven-foot wingspan, black feathers edging its underwings, and a black-and-yellow bill lined with orange.

Subantarctic snipe

Listen for its strident 'chup chup' and look in dense grasses for the nests of this small, brown wader with a long, thin beak. Only discovered in 1997, there are thought to be fewer than 50 of these rare birds living on the planet.
